In order for a gin to be truly Naval then it needs to be of a high enough proof that gunpowder will still light if a sailor spills his ration of gin on it, so a minimum of 57% ABV. The following gin would therefore be no good onboard, but it's still stronger than your average gin.

BATCH INDUSTRIAL STRENGTH £10

SLOE GINS & LIQUEURS

Sloe gin is really quite different to the clear distilled and junipery flavours of regular gin and is the only other drink that is allowed to prominently display the word 'gin' on its label.

SACRED SLOE GIN £8.50

United Kingdom 28.8% ABV

SIX O'CLOCK FIVE YEAR SLOE £15

United Kingdom 25% ABV

TAPPERS HYDROPATHIC SUMMER FRUIT PUDDING £8

United Kingdom 32% ABV

COLONSAY BRAMBLE LIQUEUR £7

United Kingdom 20% ABV

"GIN"

There is a trend to stretch the terms of what was allowed under the 'gin' definition. At FHGC we don't entertain charlatans, but we keep a selection that are right at the edges, possibly even a little over. Do tell us what you think.
